A Solid Beginning With Plenty of Scope

There is something reassuring about a home with good bones, generous proportions and plenty of room to create something more.

Set on approximately 818m², this solid 1940s concrete block residence presents an appealing combination of comfortable living, recent improvements and exciting future potential.

While there is still scope to add your own cosmetic touches and make the home truly yours, much of the groundwork has already been taken care of. Updated over recent years with new floor coverings, internal painting and improvements to the kitchen and bathroom, it is a comfortable home to move straight into while considering what comes next.
